Welcome to the World of Peggy Nisbet

This is an invitation to enter the world of the Peggy Nisbet little people—A living history in miniature is unveiled before your eyes from the early days of the legendary King Arthur of The Round Table and his fair Queen Guinevere to our present Royal Family—H.R.H. Queen Elizabeth II in State Robes: Prince Philip, Prince Charles and Queen Elizabeth The Queen Mother in Robes of the Noble Order of the Garter: H.R.H. Princess Anne, Mrs. Mark Phillips, in Her Wedding Dress.

Peggy Nisbet started making dolls in Coronation Year when, with the permission of The Lord Chamberlain, she produced a limited edition of the Queen in her Coronation Robes. Historical characters followed in quick succession, the Tudor period becoming one of the most popular, with King Henry VIII, his six wives and his daughter Queen Elizabeth I stealing the limelight. A tremendous amount of research into historical characters and costume is involved and many of the patterns Peggy Nisbet uses are taken from reproductions of original drawings of clothes of the period, scaled down to fit the Nisbet little people. A team of dedicated and highly skilled needlewomen has been built up over the years and everyone participating in the making of the dolls is drawn into a personal involvement, from the artist who paints the features, which are modelled mainly from paintings in the National Portrait Gallery and elsewhere; to the needlewoman who makes the dresses; to the "finisher" who styles the hair and adds the accessories and even to the girl who places the finished doll in its display box—every process is done with loving care and attention to detail to produce a finished article worthy of the collector for whom it is intended. Finest materials are chosen with care and every model is hand-made so that no two dolls are ever exactly alike.

One of the most meticulously made dolls is a Yeoman Warder in State Dress Uniform, the original of which was made under the personal supervision of The Governor of The Tower of London. So accurately must these be reproduced that each doll on sale at The Tower is inspected before being offered for sale.

In addition to the normal range of dolls, Peggy Nisbet creates each year a special collectors set comprising a limited edition of a small group of models each one of which she signs personally.

A Collection of Peggy Nisbet Historical Characters, will bring History to life before your very eyes.
